Randolph School Committee launches search process for Interim Superintendent

RANDOLPH, MA – The Randolph School Committee has launched a search process to select an Interim Superintendent of Schools for the 2018-2019 school year. The School Committee is seeking qualified candidates to lead the district through June 30, 2019 and will conduct a more extensive search for a long-term Superintendent during the upcoming school year.

Candidates may submit applications through the district's website until Friday, May 18. The Human Resources Department has convened a Screening Committee, comprised of staff, parents, and community members, to review applications and conduct interviews. They will submit a list of semi-finalists to the School Committee, who will select up to three finalists to participate in public interviews.

"We look forward to reviewing a strong pool of applicants to lead the Randolph Public Schools as Interim Superintendent during this pivotal time in our school district," said Ida Gordon, Chair of the Randolph School Committee. "In recent years, we have made great strides in improving student achievement, and it is critical that all of us – the School Committee, administrators, teachers, families, students, and the entire community – stay the course to maintain the momentum that has brought us this far."

In October 2017, the Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education removed the Randolph Public Schools from "underperforming" status, after a decade with that designation.

Superintendent Thomas Anderson, who has served in the position for four years, will become Superintendent of the New Bedford Public Schools on July 1.

Ms. Gordon said that additional details about the screening process for the Interim Superintendent, including community engagement opportunities with the finalists, will be announced in the coming weeks.
